Wonca Journal Watch

Synopses of articles from the medical literature relevant to family doctors, extracted from family medicine, general and specialist journals.

Human growth hormone to enhance athletic performance

The authors concluded: "Claims that growth hormone enhances physical performance are not supported by the scientific literature. Although the limited available evidence suggests that growth hormone increases lean body mass, it may not improve strength; in addition, it may worsen exercise capacity and increase adverse events. More research is needed to conclusively determine the effects of growth hormone on athletic performance."

Dementia and survival in Parkinson disease

The researchers concluded: "Dementia is a key part of survival in Parkinson disease and must be planned for in services for this condition."

Osteoporosis follow-up of patients aged 50 years and over suffering minimal trauma wrist fractures treated in the ED is poor

The researchers concluded: "Follow-up of patients suffering minimal trauma wrist fractures treated in the ED is poor. Systems to improve the identification and treatment of osteoporosis in this group are needed if future osteoporotic fractures and their consequences are to be avoided."

Maternal and paternal contribution to intergenerational recurrence of breech delivery

The researchers concluded: "Intergenerational recurrence risk of breech delivery in offspring was equally high when transmitted through fathers and mothers. It seems reasonable to attribute the observed pattern of familial predisposition to term breech delivery to genetic inheritance, predominantly through the fetus."
